Page Stallings Cross-Gable House

4250 Hunting Creek Road

Huntingtown, Calvert County

ca. 1890

Private

Erected circa 1890, the Page Stallings Cross-Gable House at 4250 Hunting Creek Road in Huntingtown is exemplary of rural vernacular housing constructed throughout Calvert County, specifically the I-house form. Although enlarged by the construction of additions, the main block of the house illustrates the popularity of the front gable and Queen Anne-style detailing in the late nineteenth century.

This two-and-a-half-story dwelling consists of a three-bay-wide main block with an I-house form and a two-and-a-half-story side addition on the west elevation. Indicative of the I-house form, there is a two-story ell projecting from the north elevation. A Queen Anne-style wrap-around porch encircles the southeast corner of the main block. The wood-frame main block is set on a solid masonry foundation and clad in aluminum siding. It is covered by a side gable roof with asphalt shingles and a dominating front gable clad with diamond-shaped wood shingles. The overhanging cornice has an ogee-molded profile and returns. The first and second stories of the main block have large 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. The half-story in the gable end on the east elevation has a semi-circular arched six-light window with narrow surrounds and back banding. The two-and-a-half-story ell has single 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. A canted, three-sided oriel window with a half-hipped roof and 8/8 sash flanked by 6/6 sash has been added to the first story of the ell on the north elevation. A two-story shed roof addition was added to the east elevation of the ell. This addition, which appears to date from the second quarter of the twentieth century, has paired 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. A shed-roof with a single square post is located in the northwest corner of the main block and ell. The wrap-around porch is one story in height, set on wood posts. It has a half-hipped roof sheathed in asphalt shingles, turned wood posts and balusters, with scroll-sawn brackets. A corbeled brick chimney rises from the center of the main block. Although the entire structure has been clad with replacement siding, the limited detailing of the west side addition suggests it was erected in the second quarter of the twentieth century. The addition is set back slightly from the wall plane of the main block.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

SETTING

The Page Stallings Cross-Gable House faces south, fronting on Hunting Creek Road. It is surrounded by mature trees and shrubs, and a macadamized driveway leads to the house. The property consists of 1.14 acres with grass, mature trees, and overgrown foundation plantings. A paved drive leads beyond the house to the garage. A metal fence circles the house at the rear. Secondary resources include two historic garages, historic shed, and an in-ground pool.

PRIMARY RESOURCE

This two-and-a-half-story dwelling consists of a three-bay-wide main block with an I-house form and a two-and-a-half-story side addition on the west elevation. Indicative of the I-house form, there is a two-story ell projecting from the north elevation. A Queen Anne-style wrap-around porch encircles the southeast corner of the main block. The wood-frame main block is set on a solid masonry foundation and clad in aluminum siding. It is covered by a side gable roof with asphalt shingles and a dominating front gable clad with diamond-shaped wood shingles. The overhanging cornice has an ogee-molded profile and returns. The first and second stories of the main block have large 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. The half-story in the gable end on the east elevation has a semi-circular arched six-light window with narrow surrounds and back banding. The two-and-a-half-story ell has single 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. A canted, three-sided oriel window with a half-hipped roof and 8/8 sash flanked by 6/6 sash has been added to the first story of the ell on the north elevation. A two-story shed roof addition was added to the east elevation of the ell. This addition, which appears to date from the second quarter of the twentieth century, has paired 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. A shed-roof with a single square post is located in the northwest corner of the main block and ell. The wrap-around porch is one story in height, set on wood posts. It has a half-hipped roof sheathed in asphalt shingles, turned wood posts and balusters, with scroll-sawn brackets. A corbeled brick chimney rises from the center of the main block.

Although the entire structure has been clad with replacement siding, the limited detailing of the west side addition suggests it was erected in the second quarter of the twentieth century. The addition is set back slightly from the wall plane of the main block. It is set on a solid masonry foundation and clad in vinyl siding. The side gable roof has a slightly steeper pitch than the roof covering the main block. The roof is sheathed in asphalt shingles with an overhanging boxed cornice. Like the main block, a front gable projects from the south elevation. The gable is clad with diamond-shaped wood shingles. The half-story of the gable end is pierced by a semi-circular arched six-light window with narrow surrounds and back banding. The symmetrically placed window openings have single 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds and louvered shutters. The north elevation has a pair of French doors at the center of the first story. Framed by a Colonial Revival surround with molded entablature, the opening is capped by a half-hipped roof with asphalt shingle cladding. An interior brick chimney rises from the ridge of the roof.

SECONDARY RESOURCES

Two garages, dating from the middle part of the twentieth century, sit side-by-side to the east of the house. The easternmost garage is a one-bay, one-story structure that sits on concrete-block piers and has wood board-and-batten siding. It has a front-gable roof covered with sheets of corrugated metal, overhanging eaves, and exposed roof rafters. A poured concrete ramp leads to the two-leaf wooden board-and-batten door. The westernmost garage is a one-story, two-bay structure that sits on a poured concrete foundation and has a side-gable roof covered with sheets of corrugated metal. It has overhanging eaves and exposed roof rafters, and is clad with wood board-and-batten siding. A historic shed, dating from the middle of the twentieth century and renovated in the latter part of the century, sits alongside the in-ground pool behind the house. The shed has a cross-gable roof covered in sheets of corrugated metal. It is clad in wood board-and-batten siding, has a wood box cornice, and 2/2 wood-sash windows with square-edged surrounds.

The house faces south onto Hunting Creek Road (Hwy. 521). The form of the house is best described as two three-bay I-houses slightly offset and joined at the gable end. It is a two-story, framed and weatherboarded structure. The trim of the main sections of the house has been so completely altered on the exterior that it is impossible to determine whether they were built at the same, or at different times. Their proportions suggest that they were built concurrently. The forward-set half of the house -- the east half -- has a side-passage-parlor plan. The set-back west half of the house has no front access to the exterior. All three bays are windows. Both sections are heated by interior brick stove flues. The original sash are two-over-one double-hung. The gable roofs of both sections have central front-facing gables that are filled in with early or original diamond-shaped wood shingles. A one-story hipped-roof porch shelters the south and east sides of the east half of the house. The porch is set on turned posts and has sawn brackets. There are recent additions to the rear. The whole house has recently been sheathed with vinyl siding.
